Jesus came to this earth to show both humans and angels what God is really like. In fact, He was the word of God—God’s thoughts spoken out loud, so we can hear them. It wasn’t just for His children on this planet that Jesus became a human being and demonstrated God’s love. He did it for all created beings. Our world is now the textbook of the whole universe. The purpose behind God’s grace, the mystery of a love deep enough to save lost humans, will be studied by angels forever. Those who saved, plus the beings, from unfallen worlds will also sing about and study Jesus’ life and death. They will find the glory that shines from Jesus’ face is the glory of selfless love. Jesus’ sacrifice on Calvary shows that the law of selfless love is the law of life for earth and heaven. This selfless love comes straight from the heart of God. In the beginning, nature reflected God like a mirror. Today sin has spoiled God’s perfect creation. But the handwriting of God’s love is still there. Even now, all created things—except for the selfish human heart—reflect in some way God’s law of love. All Nature lives to give. In the same way, angels find their joy in giving. With great love, they watch over weak and sinful humans. Into this dark world, they bring the light of heaven; with gentle patience they work to show humans the love of God and bring them into a relationship with Jesus.
